“ Lorene and I shared some special memories together. She and I gave birth to two very beautiful baby boys on the same day, same hospital, and were roommates. Her mother lived next door to Al and I and she became like a second mother to me. Lorene and I shared something else that was not as welcome as the other things we shared, lymphoma. She and I battled this disease for a couple of years together but Lorine battled this for about fourteen years. I would see her periodically and we would talk about our shared memories and talk about our families which were dear to our hearts. She was a wonderful friend and I will remember her always. She taught me many things as a young mother just from her actions.

My condolences go out to the family, each and everyone of you. I am sorry that my health kept me from seeing you personally.
