“ To my Dear sister Lola, I don't even know where to begin to say how much i miss you. You were a great sister, a loving person to us all. I can still hear your voice plain as day when i think about when we talked on the phone. You called me every year on my birthday to wish me happy birthday, i tried to do the same on your's. I know you will continue to remember me on my birthday and i will remember you, always. Love, your brother Joe I.

“ In this fast pace world, we often over look the most precious gifts God has blessed us with until there is nothing but regret. As I reflect upon your loss, I see the lessons you taught me these past few weeks. You reminded me that God is deserving of praise regardless of the pain we may endure and that staying in touch with family is very important. I will cherish the moments of laughter that we shared especially those over the past few weeks. Despite the pain you endured, you kept smiling and never lost sight of God's plan. Thank you for your unconditional love and care, I will definitely miss you! You were a special woman to so many and I only wish there was more I could have done for you.

“ MY Dear Sweet Suegra, I want to thank you for being such a wonderful mother to my husband. I always told him he couldn't have been raised by anyone better because he became such a wonderful, caring, unselfish, successful, and loving man. He got blessed when he got put in your arms. Thank you for being such an awesome grandmother and suegra to me and our little princess. I know you will be watching and guarding us from up above & will continue to protect us along with God especially our new little princess we have on the way. We will always love you & miss your beautiful sweet smile.

“ In her final days, before she became too weak to respond, we had some very good talks. On one occasion, one of her better moments when she wasn't hurting, I asked her what would she want to have. I told her it could be anything she wanted, and even if she thought it was too expensive, I told her I would do everything in my power to give it to her or make it happen. I told her again, please, anything you want. She smiled and her eyes began to water, and she told me, “please take care of your babies.” By babies, I knew she meant my wife and her grand-daughter, but also the baby we are expecting. I cried, hugged her, and told her of course I would. I think about that now, how even in her final days, she thought of the well-being and the care for others. Given the choice, she didn't think about something for herself, but for others. That was her life in a nutshell. She grew up quick, left some of her childhood and schooling behind to help her parents raise her younger siblings. She continued her life of caring, raising a child she did not bear, but loved as if she did. I am forever grateful for her and will continue to live my life indebted to God for giving me her and the other loving people in my life. I love you very much Lola, and my wonderful memories of you are with me forever.
